Preface

NurseLine Journal (NLJ) is a nursing journal intended for nurses as academics, practitioners and researchers in the field of nursing (Basic Nursing, Nursing Education, Nursing Management, Surgical Medical Nursing, Emergency Nursing, Critical Nursing, Maternity Nursing, Child Nursing , Psychiatric Nursing, Gerontic Nursing, Family Nursing, Community Nursing, and Alternative / Complementary Nursing). NurseLine Journal aims to disseminate the results of scientific nursing articles (literature review, case studies, and original research). Scientific articles published in NLJ should comply with scientific writing rules such as ethical clearance, writing standards, research data, and others as described in the journal guideline.

NLJ is a nursing journal published by the Faculty of Nursing, University of Jember in collaboration with DPD PPNI Jember Regency. NLJ publishes articles twice a year (in May and November) with 10 articles per issue. To further disseminate information and target readers more broadly, starting with Volume 5 No. 2 Year 2020 (May 2020) NLJ was published articles written in English as stated in the latest guideline.

For NLJ Volume 5 No. 2 of 2020, articles were published as many as 10 articles that describe the results of research in the field of family nursing, fundamental of nursing, medical nursing, transcultural nursing, nursing management, disaster management care. The ten scientific articles from this study provide an overview of the latest developments in the treatment of several health problems, so that they can contribute to nursing care services, both in improving the quality of nursing educations, nursing care services in clinical settings and communities, and further research in the field of nursing.

We hope that NLJ will be a nursing journal that can publish high quality of nursing research in nursing education facilities, nursing practice in clinical settings and communities through quality nursing research, meet scientific writing rules, and beneficial to academics, practitioners, and clients (clients, families, and community) directly in obtaining nursing care services. We hope that readers and researchers can submit your manuscripts to our journal and hope that your manuscript could be published in NLJ and benefit academics, practitioners, and clients (clients, families, and society).
